

SHARE YOUR EXPERIENCES

What do you think would be helpful for families to know about when they have a baby who is accessing early intervention?

What would have been helpful for you to know?

We are looking for families to volunteer to share their ideas and experience.

- Do you have a baby or toddler that is currently involved in early childhood intervention services?
- Have you been involved in early childhood intervention services in the past?

EarlyEd has received a short-term grant that will help us to collect family stories and collate this information into a Family Centred Framework of Practice for Early Intervention for babies and toddlers.

This innovative project will find out what families think is needed from their early intervention when they have concerns about their baby's development or disability.

Get involved in a number of ways:

1. Share your thoughts about
 - What information would be helpful for families to know?
 - How services should be offered?
2. Become part of our project panel
 - This will involve 2-3 meetings either in person or via teleconference. You choose what best suits you!
 - Share your thoughts on the design of the project and how we should undertake the research.

Early intervention for children with disability

Our initial design meeting will take place Wednesday 30 May.
